EX-CONVICT IN BLOODY FRACAS

Joe Miller Who Was Sent Up For Hiding Under A Lady's Bed in Trouble at Colvin's Bakery.

One night some three years ago, Mrs. Margaret Lawrence Huggs was nearly frightened out of her senses by discovering a man hiding under her bed. The intruder proved to be a stranger named Joe Miller who had been employed for a short time in DeWitt and Lane's bakery. He was found guilty of attempted burglary and committed to the state penitentiary at Waupun.

One day last week Mr. Benhison was startled to see Miller again presiding in the streets of Janesville and immediately as the fellow seemed to have graduated from the "queen" to the dangerous class, hastened to inform the police. It developed that the Colvin bakery had advertised for a man in Milwaukee and who should come to fill in to answer the summons but the same old moth-miller and prison bird.

Miller did not give satisfaction at the Colvin establishment and last evening when he went there to collect his wages for the week he got into some sort of an altercation with Michael Burns, the foreman. The latter finally struck him and in falling Miller's head and right arm came in contact with some sharp edge and were badly cut. Officer Panning was called to the scene about half past six o'clock and took the man to the lock-up.

In municipal court this morning Miller, with shirt and collar a mass of blood stains, emphatically denied that he had even tasted liquor. It was finally arranged that his bill for board should be taken from the money due him at the bakery and that he should board the next train for Milwaukee.

CRIPPLE AND GIRL WILL BE DETAINED

At Police Station Pending Arrival of Young Woman's Father From Hampton, Ia., Tonight.

Acting on information printed over the name of H. M. Clawson, a telegraph operator for the Iowa Central road at Hampton, Ia., and countersigned by Sheriff C. L. Jernegan of Franklin county, the local police department yesterday located a cripple named Harry Tucker and a fifteen-year-old girl named Lyle Clawson at the St. Charles hotel and Officer Patrick Panning escorted the pair to the city hall headquarters late in the afternoon. A message apprizing the girl's father was sent to Hampton and in a response received last evening he requested that both parties be held until he could get to Janesville probably about eight o'clock this evening.

Tucker is charged with enticing the girl from her home but denies that he is at fault in any way, unless it be in befriending a young woman who was not treated right by her parents and who was very anxious to leave them and find employment elsewhere. He claims to have succeeded in getting a place for her in a local laundry, the work to begin next Monday.

The man is of age and is as much of a strolling violinist as a pair of paralyzed limbs and crutches permit. He had been playing in the five-cent theatres at Hampton during the past two winters and there became acquainted with the girl.

The girl is a blonde of medium height. She declares that she does not wish to go home and appears quite chagrined over the fact that her parents have learned her whereabouts.

She and Tucker, it appears, met by agreement at Monmouth, Ill., the girl having told her parents at the time of her departure, that she was going to work in some Illinois city.

The violinist entertains an idea that the father will be rather angry at him and intimates that Mr. Clawson has a mean disposition. He has nevertheless agreed to return to Iowa without requisition papers.

SAVED BY A FEATHER DUSTER

Stenographer's Cluck and Dust Duster Causes Shivering Chicks to Chirp Joyfully.

New York.—A batch of cold, motherless chickens was saved by the genius of Lawyer Edward H. Clark of Jamaica and the ability of a stenographer to cluck like a hen.

Clark's office is at No. 326 Fulton street, Jamaica, and he has an estate on Grand street. But as his hens broke all the eggs he got under them he bought five chicks and took them to the office in a shoe box.

The office was cold and the chicks peeped their discomfort, and as they grew colder their peepings grew weaker.

Clark called on Lawyer Robert G. Pattle to consult about the best means to save their lives, when his eye lighted upon a feather duster, owned in fee simple by Stephen H. Voris, a third attorney.

"The very thing," said he. A hole was made in the top of the shoe box, the handle was poked through it, and the feather duster, inverted, was closed down upon the chickens. But they continued to peep.

"Twon't work," quoth Patrie. "Some one's got to cluck to give local color."

First Clark, then Patrie, then Voris clucked in their most persuasive style. The chickens, unlike the Juris, declined to be swayed.

Miss Adelaide McDonald, Voris' stenographer, was called and asked to cluck for the chickens.

Bending over the box, she clucked in so inviting and persuasive a manner that every chick chirped joyously and snuggled under the duster. They soon became warm and the batch was saved.

TELLS OF MACBETH'S LIFE

Auctioneers Preparing to Sell Rare Shakespearean Item Derived From Old MS.

New York.—A rare item of Shakespeareana to be sold at Morwin-Clayton's is "The Secret History of Macbeth, King of Scotland, With interesting Memoirs of the Ancient Thanes, Originally From a Very Old Manuscript, by P. Buchan," post, 8vo, original boards, uncut, Putebroad (Scotland), 1828.

This work was privately printed by Buchan at a press which he himself had established in the north of Scotland. It is a curious story of the "Amours and Life of Macbeth," which the editor and publisher obtained from an old man, whose habit it was to preserve every fragment of ancient Scottish literature that he could find.

The manuscript is printed as given to Buchan by this old man, excepting that the orthography has been somewhat modernized. Certain passages, he explains, "have been printed in full, which may seem rather luxurious to the censorious reader, but which, if they had been brought down to the rules of decent policy, would have destroyed the original."

In the same sale will be three volumes in vellum of the voyages of Lamurdo, published in Venice in 1663, 1665 and 1683. Each of these contains now narratives, the most important being the voyages of Verraz and Parmentier. There is a curious and interesting map of New France, which is the first engraved map purporting to represent Canada. The map of Hochelaga is the first engraved map of Montreal.

Aged Horsewoman. Despite the fact that she is 92 years of age Mrs. Mary Comer of Belvidere, Victoria, when out on horseback with friends challenged some younger women to a race. In the race her horse fell, and the aged lady sustained a fractured thigh.

KNOCKED OUT; SENT TO "PEN."

Navy Champion Gets a Year for Fighting Negro in Virginia.

Hampton, Va., July 15.—William Durand, who claims the heavyweight pugilistic championship of the United States navy, was convicted here by a jury in the circuit court of prize fighting. He was sentenced to one year in the penitentiary. Durand was knocked out several weeks ago at Buck Hoe bench by a negro named Scarborough, in the first round.

Purued by an Apparition. That burglars have a keen sense of humor has often been demonstrated, and a merry thief turned up at Chicago the other day who, running unexpectedly into a policeman, explained that he was fleeing from an apparition, and was looking for police protection. The apparition in question turned out to be a night-shirted householder whose home the fugitive had just robbed!

A Lover of the Simple Life.

It is related of Jenny Lind that after she had amassed £30,000 on her American tour she gave two-thirds of it to Swedish charities. Her true simplicity of taste is shown in one of her letters written home from Boston. "Now suspect," she wrote, "how utterly little the world and its splendor have been able to turn my mind gladdly. Herrings and potatoes, a clean wooden chair, and a wooden spoon to eat milk soup with—that would make me skip like a child for joy. And this without the slightest trace of exaggeration."—Exchange.

Little Meat; Good Health.

Italians of the poorer class generally enjoy good health. This is partly attributed to the fact that the working class of Italy eat less meat than those of other European nations.

The Dancing Mania.

The "dancing mania" of the middle ages came on the heels of the great plague known as the "Black Death." It was some sort of nervous disease, and is now supposed to have been what is known as "St. Vitus' dance." It began in the year 1374, at Aix-la-Chapelle, and spread all over Germany, the Netherlands and Italy. The dancers formed circles hand in hand, and, appearing to have lost all reason, continued dancing, regardless of the bystanders, for hours together, until, in their wild delirium, they fell to the ground in sheer exhaustion. Panting and foaming at the mouth, they would suddenly spring up and begin the dance again, to be again exhausted, and so on until they died. The mania involved millions of people and held on for more than two centuries.

MAYOR CARLE HOME FROM FOND DU LAC

Meeting of League of Wisconsin Municipalities Was a Great Success—Enjoyed Trip to Waupun.

Mayor Wilbur P. Carle and Alderman J. J. Dulin have returned from Fond du Lac where they attended the twelfth annual convention of the League of Wisconsin Municipalities. The honor was impressed by an address delivered by a Milwaukee attorney who argued for the passage of a drastic law restricting the campaign expenses of candidates for office. If this speaker's plan were carried out, an aspirant for city office would deposit about $10 with the city clerk and the latter would cause to have printed and mailed to every voter in the district a pamphlet containing the candidate's recommendations and perhaps his picture. He would not be allowed to have any "workers" or spend money in any other way to further his chances of election. The convention did not go on record in favor of the plan but passed a resolution calling on the legislature to pass some stricter measure regulating campaign expenses. Mayor Carle of Milwaukee and others read interesting papers. As a general thing the speakers devoted more attention to criticism of things as they are than to constructive plans for bettering them.

The citizens of Fond du Lac provided automobiles to take the visiting city fathers to Waupun, where the pontooning was inspected, and no effort was spared to make the visit an enjoyable as well as a profitable one. Mayor Carle visited and was greatly pleased with the Elder's handsome home in the neighboring city.

FLOUR PRICES TO ADVANCE.

Liberal Methods of Jersey Lily Flour Manufacturer—Miss Ross to Continue Work.

Owing to the great advance in the wholesale price of flour it has become necessary to increase the price of Jersey Lily, though it had been hoped that the advance would be temporary. The price of flour at the present time should sell regularly at $1.50, but on account of the fact that Miss Ross is making a canvass of this city, a special reduction was made to $1.50, to help Miss Ross in her work here. This price of $1.50 will prevail in Janesville up to July 20th, and all orders taken up to that date will be honored at the price of $1.50, but deliveries will have to be made on these orders before August 1st. Orders taken after June 20th will be on a basis of $1.60, which at that time will be considerably under the market. If Miss Ross has not called on you, your order can be sent to any grocer.

The postmaster, assistant postmaster and clerks receive $13,000 for the same period and the salary of the rural route carriers out of this office totals $8,064 per year. YOUNG BOY HURT IN WILD RUNAWAY

Louis Konlene, While Driving a Cultivator Had Narrow Escape From Death.

Louis Konlene, the twelve year old son of August Konlene, who lives a mile and three quarters west of Pontville, had a narrow escape from death or serious injury yesterday when the team he was driving to the cultivator ran away. The team became frightened in some way and made a mad dash across the field, and they tore through three wire fences before being brought to a stand still. The boy's foot was caught on the machine and he could not liberate himself and his clothes were literally torn into shreds from his body. There were fifty cuts on his body but he was not seriously injured.

ISLAND OF FELINES

Dealers Make Rich Profit on 15 Acres of Cats.

Every Evening Tables and Toms Are Treated to Big Fish Dinner—Supply Demand for Inexpensive Fur for Medium-Priced Muffs.

Seattle, Wash.—There is an island in Puget sound of about 15 acres, the center of which is a dense forest of fir, hemlock and cedar. Underbrush, vines and ferns have intergrown amid the trunks of the trees until the whole seems as impenetrable to human traffic as a jungle. The shore line is a mixture of gigantic rocks and stretches of sandy beach. No man would choose to live on the island, but nevertheless it is the means of earning a big income for six men who are prominent in the fur trade of the Pacific coast.

The island has been used as a cat farm. It is so thick with cats that the rocks appear from the docks of passing steamers to be literally covered with the feline quadrupeds. They are of all ages, colors and sizes. Passengers like to have the captain pull the boat close to shore that they may see the cats rolling, leaping and playing on the rocks, beach or on the trunks of fallen trees.

There are thousands of cats on this cat island and they are the source of great profit to their owners, who sell their fur that women may have muffs. Every evening a boatload of men land on the south shore of the island. About dusk they unload a quarter of a mile long. They fasten one end to the rocky shore and take the other end in their boat, making a great semicircle, the radius of which is the extreme length of the sea. When the boat reaches shore farther to the west the net appears to be dragging a heavy load of fish. The men pull until the net empties its load of hundreds and hundreds of poups of many kinds of fish upon the beach. Then they wash the sea, land it into their boats and pull away for their homes.

The next morning the fish have disappeared. The cats have devoured them.

There is a growing demand for inexpensive fur to supply the medium-priced muffs and furs and the fish-fed cats have proven a source of extraordinary profit to their owners. Not only on this island, but on other islands has the industry sprung up, and on the extreme western coast of the state the rocky islands are maintaining their cat farms. Some men also breed foxes, otters and other fur-bearing animals.

It has been found that cats fed on fish possess a very beautiful glossy fur with longer hair than that of the domesticated cats.

Every year there is a great round-up and several thousands of cats lose their lives.

SQUIRREL STOPS STREET CAR

Peaky Little Varmint Gets In Road and Only Saved by Kind-Hearted Man at Lever.

Cincinnati, O.—The early car on the Madison road line was bowling along Madison road the other morning. The passengers, men and women, whose work calls them out in the early morning, were chatting or reading their papers. Suddenly there was a grinding of wheels, sparks flew from the steel tracks and the car was checked with a chug that shook up the passengers. It was west of Wild avenue and had been brought down to a slow roll when the passengers looked out to see what was wrong. They could see nothing but a clear track. St. Davis, the motorman, known to all the passengers, explained the cause of the sudden slowing down, when these words floated from the vestibule: "If you don't keep out of my road, you peaky varmint, I will get you sure. This is the third time you did that, and if you try it again I am going to roll over you and flatten you out like a pin."

"What's the matter, St?" asked several of the passengers.

"Oh, there is a gray squirrel that for the last three mornings has been running across the track just as I come along. I almost got him this morning, but I slowed up in time. He's a cute little fellow."

Perched in the grass on the Evans lawn was the squirrel, and if there is such a thing as a squirrel laughing, then this one was doing a large laughing stunt.

Teaches Fifty-One Years.

Norfolk, Va.—After fifty-one years as a teacher in the Charlotte street public school, Mrs. Mary E. Hodges has tendered her resignation. During her long service Mrs. Hodges was absent only six times, and on one occasion taught school with one of her arms broken and in a sling. She was eighteen when she began teaching in 1858, and when her resignation was read before the city school board Superintendent Dobbie stated that she was one of the best teachers in the entire system.

Produces Lake of Oil.

San Antonio, Texas.—According to a statement issued by the Texas Cotton Seed Crushers' association, Texas last year produced 42,000,000 gallons of cottonseed oil. Of this quantity about one-fourth was consumed in the state, while the balance went to other markets.

$800,000 BOGUS STAMPS FOUND.

Forgers in Montreal Have Been Robbing United States.

Montreal, July 15.—Colonel Sherwood, commissioner of the Dominion police, and Chief Carpenter of the city detective bureau established the fact that Montreal, for probably six months or more, has been the headquarters of a band that has been robbing the United States government through forged postage stamps.

Stamps worth $800,000 were seized in a store kept by T. Astrusky, where they were displayed for sale as curios. Another lot, with a face value of $200,000, was seized at William Frank's.

TAFT WITHDRAWS MORE LAND.

Total Coal Fields Held Up Now Amounts to 71,518,588 Acres.

Beverly, Mass., July 15.—President Taft made a big stroke for conservation and incidentally gave voice to an expression from Secretary Ballinger regarded as a boost over the former administration. The action of the president consisted of withdrawing 10,000,000 acres of coal lands from entry, bringing the total coal land withdrawals made by him up to the enormous total of 71,518,588 acres. Something like half of this amount are new withdrawals. The work is now complete and is epitomized in a letter to the president from Secretary Ballinger.

NAVAL OFFICER IS DISMISSED.

Paymaster Haughey Goes Out of Service on Embezzlement Charge.

Washington, July 15.—Assistant Paymaster Lawrence D. Haughey of Indiana, attached to the Castine of the Atlantic torpedo fleet, was dismissed from the navy on a charge of embezzlement.

During the absence of Haughey from the ship on account of illness the safe on board the Castine was opened and $3,500 was found to be missing. Haughey was ordered court-martialed and found guilty of culpable inefficiency, but not guilty of embezzlement.

The attorney general subsequently gave an opinion that Haughey was technically guilty of embezzlement. Haughey on the day his trial began made good the money which had been taken.

CHARLES GATES OPERATED ON.

Son of John W. Goes Under the Knife for Appendicitis.

New York, July 15.—Charles G. Gates, son of John W. Gates, was operated upon in the New York hospital for appendicitis. Reports from his bedside are to the effect that he was doing nicely and his condition is all that the surgeons could wish for under the circumstances. This operation was the result of several weeks' illness that began in Paris.

Killed in Mistake for Another.

100 PERISH IN BURNING SHIP.

Passenger Steamer Founders in Black Sea Following Collision.

Odessa, July 15.—Trapped on a burning, sinking steamer, 100 men, women and children perished near Kherson, on the Black sea, according to dispatches received here today. After collision with the steamer Wampoa, the passenger steamer Lovki, crowded with passengers, foundered. Her boilers exploded and not a score of those aboard escaped. Mothers threw their children overboard, hoping to see them picked up, only to see them drown.

The explosion of the boilers lifted the vessel from the water and sent it ashore. Many victims were Jewish fugitives. Within 15 minutes there was no trace of the collision save debris and dead bodies.

Montgomery, Ala., July 15.—Conspiracy to use the United States mails to defraud seven big tailoring establishments in Chicago is charged in an indictment returned by the federal grand jury investigating the bankruptcy proceedings of the City Jewellery company, in which seven Shreve brothers and others are involved.

The indictment directed against the Shreve brothers and J. R. Losey of Andalusia, Ala., alleges that they planned to order clothes by mail, intending not to pay for them.

The proviso was that he leave St. John's without money and travel a distance equal to the circumference of the earth within seven years. His journey took him to Europe.

Marriage contracts written on ostrich or potatoes have been unearthed at Luxor, Egypt, which convict the experimental union man of unoriginality. They are two thousand years old. TWEEDLE'S TITIAN

By A. E. SCOTT

Copyright 1909, by Benj. D. Hampton.

TWEEDLE sat in the bare, dirty room which he dignified by the name of "studio," with a damp rag in one hand and a large canvas in front of him. On the floor stood several easels and against the wall leaned many canvases; yet no model ever graced the dingy "topfloor front," and no tin plate armor flaunted its "superior joints," to intimate that Tweedle was an artist.

Yet an artist he was, in soul, mind and ambition. In dreams and twilight musings he painted pictures ranging in subject from Childe Roland's arrival at the dark tower, to the departure of Mr. Richard Croker for Europe; but in nightmares and daily work hours he was a restorer of faded canvases. Discolored portraits, cracked landscapes, and blotched nudes all regained their pristine brilliancy under his deft hands, and the reason, at once pathetic and conclusive, that he did not paint pictures for himself, was that his efforts in that direction were, no quote his kindest critics, "grotesque."

This, however, did not prevent him from allowing his hair to grow to considerable length, or from wearing a flowing necktie and black velvet jacket on all possible occasions, though the necessity for keeping body and soul together compelled him to paint by proxy instead of allowing his hand to wander creatively over virgin canvases.

Wrapping the rag round his finger tips, he moistened it in a thick, treacly mixture, and settled down to work with a dissatisfied sigh.

The picture before him, with several others, had been sent him by one of the largest dealers in New York, who often gave him work during the rush season. He had finished the rest about a week before, but this was so begrimed that the figure on it was scarcely visible and he had left it till the last.

As far as he could see, the figure was that of a woman in the rich dress of an Italian gentleman of some centuries ago. He set to work on the head and was surprised to find with what ease he was able to clean off the layer of dirt which had formed over the paint.

"Must be some kind of preservative," he said to himself.

With growing wonder he sponged carefully on, from the high masses of hair piled up over the lofty forehead to the light, firm tints of the flesh. Tweedle could not paint, but as a connoisseur his opinion was by no means to be despised. As the face and hair gradually discovered themselves he worked with increasing eagerness till the whole of the head was cleared of its sooty coating. The carmine of the lips, the rose flush on the cheek, and the rich bronze of the hair sprang out clear and bright, as if the painter's brush had just touched the high-tints into the dark eyes.

"It's a Titian!" Tweedle exclaimed with such rapidity and vehemence that it sounded like a sneeze. He stared at it from every point of view, examined it in every kind of light, and applied every test known to him. No, there could be no mistake; it was the work of the great Venetian Tiziano, and, more than that, it was an unexampled masterpiece in a marvelous state of preservation.

Tweedle rubbed his nose reflectively, tragically with the damp rag. "A most extraordinary thing," he murmured, "how many points of similarity there are between myself and Titian—our ideals, our coloring, our compositions are identical, yet there is an unaccountable difference." His soliloquy was interrupted by a knock at the door, followed by the entrance of a messenger boy with a note, which read as follows:

Dear Tweedle: If you have not already cleaned the four pictures I sent down about three weeks ago, do not begin on them now. The customer who sent them down to Mr. H. E. Bell, has gone bankrupt for nearly a million, and as the pictures are worthless, we had better send them back to be sold by auction with the other effects, and take our chance with the rest of the creditors.

Isaac Knoed.

For the rest of the afternoon Tweedle put aside his work and occupied himself solely with cogitations and cigarettes. His face frequently wreathed in smiles of content bore silent testimony that his musings were in nowise unpleasant.

Some three weeks later, among the little crowd present at the sale of Mr. Bell's effects, was Theobald Tweedle with an ill-assumed expression of ease on his face and a hundred dollars in bills of various denominations in his pocket.

It was not till nearly dusk that the auctioneer came to the pictures which had been stored in an attic at the top of the house, and Tweedle's heart beat wildly as he saw them, six in number, put up by the auctioneer for bids in lots of two at a time.

Thus it was that next morning Tweedle puffed out his butterfly necktie to its utmost extent, and attired himself in his most paint-stained velvet coat, as befitting the owner of a real, genuine Titian.

All day he worked eagerly, smearing, wiping, rubbing and sponging till once more the noble Italian lady sat before him, at a table littered with scrolls and parchments, clothed in her gorgeous sixteenth century satin dress, and decked with jewels in cunningly wrought Venetian settings.

"Might have been painted yesterday," he murmured to himself in ecstatic enthusiasm, "and what's more, I might have painted it myself yesterday. Every tone in the coloring and every curve in the drawing is just as I have dreamed them on imaginary canvases; and yet the world passes me over and gives all the credit to this man Titian. If I should exhibit that work as my own, critics would prostrate themselves before me, and the papers would strain to outdo one another in fulsome adulation. My cup room without giving his picture more than a cursory glance, but later he heartened up when Ashby, the great critic, arrived. Tweedle made his way to him and dragged him over to view his contribution.

"Now, what do you think of that?" he asked with conscious pride.

Ashby peered through his gold-rimmed glasses, then settled them more firmly on his nose, came closer, and peered again.

"The face reminds me of something—" he said reflectively.

"One of the old masters?" suggested Tweedle helpfully.

"No, it's not that."

"A Murillo, perhaps?" he began to be fearful lest Ashby get on the right track.

"No—ah, I've got it. That face has just the same markings as a Great Auk's egg I saw in a museum once."

"You call yourself an art critic!" began Tweedle in a stalling tone.

"Why, that picture was painted—"

"He was choking to tell Ashby the secret and watch him wilt beneath his scorn."

"It's a great improvement on your last, though," said the critic in a kindly, patronizing way. "I knew it was a female figure directly I looked at it."

Tweedle strove to articulate, but speech failed him; and the final drop was added to his cup of bitterness the next day when he found that the only reference to his picture in any of the many papers in the city was one little four-line item, which read:

"Mr. Theobald Tweedle exhibited a picture, which though scarcely a success as an oil painting, would make an excellent sampler if it were worked in worsted."

For nearly a month Tweedle mourned over the downfall of his masterpiece, then drew his savings from the bank, took ship and went to London.

On his arrival he hired a modest room with a good light for his picture, and a yet more modest one with no light at all for himself.

Without being let into the plot Ashby had provided him with some letters of introduction to two Royal Academicians and a member of the purchasing committee of the National Gallery.

To these he sent courteous invitations to view what he modestly referred to as the "finest Titian in existence."

"If the world refuses to recognize my talents, it must at least acknowledge my judgment," he told himself.

The tribunal of three arrived together and, trembling with eagerness, Tweedle conducted them into the presence of his Italian lady.

He drew the curtain from before her, arranged the window-blind with painstaking exactness, and awaited the decree of his judges. Three naked eyes and three shining lenses (the National Gallery man wore spectacles, and one of the R. A.'s wielded an eyeglass) gazed, rubbing at the canvas. Number one moved a little to the right and put his head on one side, number two moved to the left and scratched his chin, while number three retreated two paces to the rear and converted his hands into opera glasses.

In a few minutes they seemed to have gathered sufficient conviction to make another move, for One glanced towards Two and coughed, whereupon Two looked at Three and nodded. Three apparently thought that something was expected of him, so he turned to One and ejaculated "H'm," with startling abruptness. This was the signal for attack, and they advanced upon the picture at the double with drawn magnifying glasses. Presently Three broke the silence again.

"I think so," he said.

"Certainly," murmured Two.

"Certainly," echoed One.

Tweedle awoke from a period of terrible suspense to find himself famous. Each of the three great men outcried the others in congratulations.

"Where did you discover it?" asked one of them.

"THEY ADVANCED UPON THE PICTURE."

The first pair, a sea-scape and a water color, went for nine dollars; the second couple, a still life study and a large engraving fetched fifteen dollars, and lastly, the big picture, (Tweedle had taken care that the face was of a uniform dirtiness with the rest) was held up for inspection beside a large landscape.

Someone began the bidding at five dollars.

"Six," said Tweedle, not wishing to appear too anxious.

"Ten." This from a little man who looked as if he might be a furniture dealer.

"Fifteen," said Tweedle.

The little man opened his mouth as if to speak and then changed his mind and closed it.

"Will anyone say twenty?" asked the auctioneer.

"Going, going, gone."

of ambition would be filled to overflowing. And after all, if you look deep enough into the matter to ignore the facts, I did paint it in spirit—"

The ultimate outcome of this line of reasoning was that shortly afterwards the catalogue of a small but select exhibition of pictures contained the following entry: No. 26. Tweedle, Theobald, "Portrait of a Lady in Costume."

In fear and trembling, Tweedle awaited the opening of the exhibition, and then, went modestly forward to receive the acclamations of the crowd. He entered the main room, where the Titian, or rather the Tweedle, was hanging in a splendid position, and seated himself on a red plush sofa to await the worshippers. His spirits sank lower and lower, however, as the stream of people flowed through the gallery.

He saw the picture more than a cursory glance, but later he heartened up when Ashby, the great critic, arrived. Tweedle made his way to him and dragged him over to view his contribution.

A Feather in His Cap.
The expression "a feather in his cap" is very generally used as denoting some achievement of a not overly serious nature, but in its original application the term was about equivalent to remarking that such and such an affair was a nice scalp for Mr. Smith's belt.

Value of Married Friendship.
Possibly there would be more married lovers if men and women alike realized that marriage should not be called to friendship with the opposite sex. It is next to impossible that a wife should find in her husband, or husband find in his wife, every qualification for mental friendship, yet this does not mean that the wife may not consider her husband the only man in the world worth being married to, or the husband does not consider his wife to be the one mate he wanted.

She Knew.
The library and household effects of a man who had once entertained in a lavish way were sold at public auction, and among the persons who went to the sale were many who had enjoyed the fallen family's hospitality. When a set of after-dinner cups was put up one woman said: "There are only five of those, not six." The auctioneer consulted his catalogue, and replied: "Thank you, you are right," and proceeded with the sale.

Remarkable Oldest Man.
One of the sanest old men in Maine at the present time is Simon Smith of East Dixfield. Mr. Smith was born October 1, 1817, and is therefore ninety-three years of age. He never used liquor or tobacco, tea or coffee, and never required the services of a physician. He is proud of the fact that he never received a darning letter or sent one. His health is still excellent and he often calls on friends.—Kennebec Journal.

Bets End to Public Service.
It was the example set by Nathaniel Macon, one of the old-time public men of the south, that has influenced Congressman Champ Clark in settling a bet for his own retirement. Mr. Macon fixed upon his seventy-fifth birthday, and when it came he immediately resigned his seat in the United States senate, although his term was no more than half expired. Mr. Clark proposes to retire likewise at precisely seventy-five.

DAILY DIET HINTS

By DR. T. J. ALLEN
Food Specialist.VEGETARIANISM GIVES EN-DURANCE.

"All flesh is grass," and the flesh-eater eats at second-hand what the vegetable eater takes more directly from the soil, which, with the air and water, contain all the elements needed to maintain the physical organism. A knowledge of the needs of the body and of the composition of foods, easily acquired, will enable many to select vegetable foods so as to live in better health without meat, while greatly reducing the cost.

Many people think that meat is the "most strengthening of all foods." This is an erroneous as the old idea that alcohol is an stimulant. Strength is in the system, not in the food, which stimulates its discharge. Nervous energy controls muscular exercise, and the activity of the nervous system depends largely upon the proper supply of the mineral elements of food and albumen, in form readily assimilated. Poisonous matters from food, from muscular exercise, from mental toxins, from metabolism of wear and tear in all tissues, clog the system like dust in a machine. Sleep overcomes this effect, partly. Albumen, of which meat largely consists, requires most energy to digest and eliminate, and meat contains wastes, accumulated in the system of the animal from which it was taken, especially in stock moved great distances to be slaughtered. Carbon is the immediate material of muscular energy, and fruit sugar is the most quickly and least expensively oxidized; starch next. On bananas, when the system is adapted to their digestion, more vigorous physical work can be done than on meat. In fact, no food fails to long sustain physical work more surely than meat. Hence all the great walking contests in England, Germany and America have been won by vegetarians.

George Allen, who walked a thousand miles across England and Scotland in 17 days, leading his flesh-eating competitors about seven days, is a strict vegetarian. In the recent Germany army contest, vegetarians won.

WOMAN'S PAGE

The Evening Chit-Chat

By RUTH CAMERON

WHEN a man once complained to Alice Freeman Palmer, the famous president of Wellesly, that he stupidly could not remember the names of half the people he met, Mrs. Palmer answered him:

"Oh, yes, you could if you had to. It is simply that you never had to do it. Whatever we have to do we always can do."

As an abstract statement I suppose that is true. Indeed, I own it sounds very much like some remarks of my own in former chats, but I do wish the great college president had gone a step further, and contributed a few definite details as to just how that impossibility could be made possible.

One of my readers asked me recently to put into this column an infallible method of teaching one's self to remember the names of people one meets. If I had such a method, my friend, I would probably have asked it long ago. But, as it happens, that is one of the will-of-the-wisps that I myself have been hunting for many years.

It certainly is a pain-smoothing ability to be able to readily attach the right name to every familiar face, but an ability that few people seem to possess.

The person who never forgets a face and never remembers a name is a familiar friend of all of us, maybe lives in the same house and sleeps in the same bed.

"I remember your face perfectly, but I can't quite recall your name." Who of us hasn't had that said to him a thousand times and very likely said it about as many?

Of course, to an extent this defect in the memory can be overcome, and although I know no infallible method of doing so, I can give my inquiring friends, and any who like her are troubled by this irritating weakness, a few suggestions while long struggling with my own difficulties along this line, has given me.

In the first place, when you are introduced to a person, use the name in acknowledging the introduction. Make it an invariable rule to add to your, "I am glad to meet you," or "How do you do?" the name of your new acquaintance.

If you don't just catch it, ask who it was. It will be much less embarrassing to do so at once than later.

Secondly, in conversing, speak the name of your vis-a-vis occasionally. Don't just call him "you" all the time. Not only does this one of their names, for some unknown reason, please most people, but, of course, it also fixes the name in your mind.

Again, when you see an acquaintance on the street, or in the car merely to bow to, and find you can not at once recall his name, do not let the matter drop simply because you do not have to say the name just then. Rather do all in your power, such as running over the alphabet, recalling the circumstances under which you met him, etc., to bring the name back. If you recall it this time it will be much easier to do it the next time when you are obliged to use it.

"Oh, yes, that's all very well," I can hear some one saying, "but when you have a memory like mine such things are no more than drops in a bucket."

Quite so, my friend, but I confessed in the beginning that I couldn't give you the bucketful. And if it's a question of drops, maybe you can remember what it is that makes "the mighty ocean and the beautiful land."

OUR STANDARDS OF CRITICISM.

BY MARY RUSSELL.

When you meet with selfishness, where you had expected to find a noble forgetfulness of self—when you find hardness of heart where you had dreamed of a Christlike sympathy—when you discover conceit and egotism where there had seemed a delightful humility and unselfishness of self—what effect does it have on your own character?

I have been amused by listening to the criticisms of children. They are the keenest and most merciless of critics because they have not yet learned to discriminate. They take the appearance for all there is of a trait, without considering the conditions out of which has come that appearance. Usually, with a child, the criticism of conceit is followed by a vainglorious statement of "I can do it just as well." Selfishness is denounced and some deed of the small critic is brought forward as proof of the superiority of the speaker. And so it goes.

Always the thought of self comes in for a comparison which usually rounds to the credit of the small censor.

We smile at the childishness of it all and feel very competent in the strength of our years and larger growth.

Listen to the older people under the same conditions, however, and you will find that the child in the adult has not been entirely eliminated. We still use a standard limited by that fatal ninth letter of the alphabet. Our ideas, our aspirations, our behavior, our success, our children all seem a little better and a little finer than those of our neighbor.

It is natural and perhaps one of the wisest of nature's provisions, for it helps each man toward a measure of content.

Believe in your own and you will find a greater happiness, but beware of always voicing your belief. It has been truly said that comparisons are odious, and in addition to making one disagreeable they build a veil of carrying hardness into the character which we are working upon.

Did you ever stop to think how many people would be happy in the heaven they speak of so longingly?

The thoughts and feelings they would have to eliminate would leave a small and naked soul to carry into the Great Beyond.

Even the ministers and leaders of religious thought would often be scantily furnished with the fruits of life, when the hardness of thought of others and the narrow limitations which have bound them to the few whose creeds are their creeds, shall be taken from them.

It is well to have a high standard to live up to and to measure our own deeds by, but we must always remember that the reason we have that standard lies deeper than meets the eye. It is due to the condition in which we find ourselves placed. A standard of behavior for one may not be applicable, save in the large generalities, to another. Therefore, we cannot measure the behavior by our small rule, for we cannot go into the life of that other deep enough to understand why he has set his gauge lower than our own.

Perhaps his ideals, under the conditions with which he struggles, are even higher and nobler than our own. Therefore measure no man's deeds by comparison. Work out your own life and your own ideals without an attempt to rise by stepping on the character of others.

In the last analysis it is your own self which will be judged—not yours as it compares with another. Never forget that, for by what you do alone will your merit be gauged.

SELF-HEATING IRON

Alcohol Supplies the Heat Which Can Be Effectively Regulated.

An improved form of self-heating solder is shown herewith, the invention of a Minneapolis man. Not only does the iron keep hot for about two hours and a half at one filling of alcohol—the fuel used—but the heat can be regulated. The iron is made of good metal, tested under high pressure. In the body are the wheels and to the rear rises a cylindrical tank which holds a half pint of alcohol. From this tank the liquid flows down to the wheels, which can be turned up or down by a key at the back. The filler plug is protected with a safety device, so there is no danger of explosion in any way. It takes only a few minutes to have the iron ready for use, and as the implement is said to remain heated for two hours and a half on a half pint of alcohol, it can be seen that it is not very expensive. The people who live in close quarters or who do not care to light the gas stove in the summer to heat an iron this month is very convenient.

WILL BUY AMERICAN CATTLE

Slaughter Houses Do Erected at Smithfield and Importation of Meat Discontinued.

London.—To encourage the importation of American cattle into England, the city of London corporation has a big scheme on hand. It is proposed to construct a huge slaughter house and cold storage plant in connection with the Metropolitan meat market at Smithfield.

Two hundred and fifty thousand dollars will be spent on the scheme, and when they are completed the buildings will constitute one of the finest establishments of their kind in the world. They will be equipped with all the latest appliances and are expected to create a revolution in the importation of cattle into this country.

The scheme is viewed with consternation by the railroad companies here, who receive a large proportion of their income from the carriage of frozen meat from Liverpool and other ports to London. Under the new scheme cattle will be shipped direct to London.

This scheme will have a double advantage. The meat of foreign cattle killed in London will fetch as high a price in the market as if the cattle had been of English origin, while it will reduce enormously the necessity for consuming frozen meat.

There are already two great slaughter yards in this country—at Birkenhead and Deptford, near London—but their capacity is not equal to the demand which any considerable increase in the importation of live American cattle would make upon them.

RADIUM SUBSTITUTE FOUND BY FORMER MILTON RESIDENT

Dr. E. Stillman Bailey of Chicago,
One of Discoverers of New Substance, Thorax.

[Special to the Gazette.]

Milton, July 14.—Dr. E. Stillman
Bailey of Chicago, who with Dr. Frank Blackmar of that city claims to have found a substitute for radium of much less cost and a great deal less dangerous, is a former Milton man and graduate from Milton college with the class of 1873. Dr. Bailey and Dr.
Blackmar have been experimenting for the past four years with their new discovery, a radioactive substance which practically takes the place of the radium and which is known as thorax.

The discovery of the radium substitute was announced by Dr. Bailey at the sixty-sixth annual convention of the American Homeopathic Institute, in session at Pasadena, Cal. The Institute has given its fullest endorsement to the discovery, which has now fully passed its experimental stage, after an exhaustive study by the two Chicago scientists.

Radium has been a two edged sword, even in the hands of the most expert specialists, since its discovery.
Besides, it is one of the most high priced substances known. A short time ago Dr. Blackmar paid $125 for two milligrams of the precious substance. Because of its enormous price, its use has not come into general use.
It is stated that thorax can be bought for a hundredth of the price now charged for pure radium.

The new substance is a combination of thorium and a plithic product, which in its effect is uranium with its highly poisonous properties removed.
Dr. Bailey and Dr. Blackmar have records of cures of supposedly incurable cases of X-ray burns, cancer and other serious diseases.

Thorax will never be placed on the market for laymen, but will be furnished for the use of scientifically trained men only. One of the most important properties of the substance is its power to alloy pain.

Dr. Bailey and Dr. Blackmar worked on this discovery for about four years.
Dr. Bailey said: "We are wholly satisfied that thorax is beyond the experimental stage, but we have not announced the discovery, except to the profession. We are now receiving demands for it from all over the globe. We have sent the substance to Australia, Asia, Europe and South America."

"Thorax is a combination of radioactive substances, and it is more practical than radium in that it is not nearly as caustic in its effects or as dangerous. We have cured cancers with it, and have met with remarkable results in allaying neuritic pains of the severest nature by its application.
It can be used for internal as well as external needs."

"We have experimented most carefully with the substance and have found that the tissue of the body absorbs its radio energy like a photographic plate absorbs light."

"I have no doubt that thorax will be in general use among scientists before long and that it will be of enormous service in the medical world."

Dr. Bailey is still in Pasadena, where he went to explain the uses of the discovery which, it is said, will be a milestone in medical and surgical science.

AUSTRIAN ON TRIP AROUND THE WORLD

Joe Mikulec, Who is Walking 25,000

Miles, Passed Through Monroe

On Way to Madison.

[Special to the Gazette.]

Monroe, Wis., July 15.—An Austrian, giving his name as Joe Mikulec, passed through the city on his way to Madison. He is traveling around the world on foot and carried on his back a knapsack and haversack, uses a cane and wore numerous medals planned to his blouse. He stopped in one of the groceries when in the city, and got supplies for his supper. He travels the famous Weston inland, having already made a distance of 21,000 miles, leaving him 4,000 miles yet to cover of a total of 25,000 miles. He intends to visit every capital in the United States and secure the seals of all the capitals. He is not allowed to beg, and he makes his way by means of the seals of the various states, which he carries along with him. When he has a hundred seals, he will be able to travel around the world.

He was a short, wiry fellow and looked a though he had roughed his way in the world. He gets 50,000 francs or $10,000 in our money, providing he reaches the goal on schedule time.

Relatives here have been notified of the death of Mrs. J. K. Olson, formerly Miss Alice Truman of this city, whose death occurred at her home in Carthage, Mo. She removed from here about 18 years ago with her husband, locating in Missouri.

Two children and the husband survive, besides three brothers and one sister, Charles, John and Will Truman, and Mrs. Ed. W. Johnson of this city, and a sister, Mrs. Elizabeth Johnson, residing in Carthage.

A plan has been set on foot to close business houses in the city from 2 to 5 o'clock during the summer in order that the merchants may attend the midweek ball game. The merchants may be asked to sign an agreement of this kind.

The delivery team driven on the grocery wagon of Meythaler Bros., came near smashing through the large plate glass windows of Bunker & Stauffer's clothing store when they came away from the watering tank on North Jefferson street through the east side of the square. The fact that the lines caught in the hub and wound about the front wheel was all that saved the windows from destruction. The horses were brought to a standstill by this circumstance.

James M. Dixon, formerly of this city, now located at Chasely, N. D., writes that the crops in that section are a total failure and that he has been a heavy loser.

ST. SWITHIN'S DAY WEATHER FORECAST

According to the Superstition There Will Be No Rain for a Month
If Today Is Fair.

This is St. Swithin's Day, a day second only to Groundhog Day in the calendar of the superstitions. According to the ancient legend, St. Swithin's day, if it be a dry day, for forty days it will remain so. For forty days it will rain and melt.

Before he became a saint Swithin was bishop of Winchester and cham-cellor of the realm. It was in Winchester that he was reared, educated in the monastery which in due time received his vows and over which he was made provost after his ordination by Bishop Hildelund. He was so famed as a wise and prudent man that King Edward appointed him tutor to his son Ethelwold. In 838 Ethel-wold succeeded his father and returned to secular life, for he had already been ordained a sub-deacon. In 852 he secured the consecration of his old tutor to the see of Winchester, made him chancellor and through his urgency set aside a fifth of all the lands of the kingdom for the church.

Bishop Swithin accompanied Alfred the Great to Rome for his confirmation, ruled his see for ten years and died July 2, 862. Such was his humility that he requested that he might be buried outside his cathedral church, "where the feet of passersby might tread and the rain of heaven fall on his tomb." The legend connecting his name with the weather arose from the moving of his body from the lowly grave in the churchyard to its golden shrine in the cathedral being delayed by continuous rain.

When the clergy were about to commence the ceremony of removing the bishop's remains a heavy rain burst forth and continued without intermission for the forty succeeding days.
The monks interpreted this tempest as a warning from heaven of the importance of their attempt to contravene the direction of St.
Swithin. Consequently it was not until 1694 that the remains were finally removed to the choir of the new cathedral, where they still repose in the crypt behind the reredos.

Local Namesakes of the Royal Irish Family Receive Word of Their Coat of Arms Being Secured.

Has anybody here seen Kelly? K-E-double L-Y.

Has anybody here seen Kelly?
Kelly with the green necktie.

Sure his hair is red and his eyes are blue.

Has anybody here seen Kelly? Kelly from the Emerald Isle.

Some families of Janesville Kellys have received letters within the last few days informing them that they are descendants of ancient Irish kings, and for the small sum of $1 they will receive the famous Kelly coat of arms.

The glad tidings that they are descendants of Irish kings is being received all over the country from an eastern corner, which says it makes a specialty of looking up "family trees."

It was "after years of research in the libraries of Dublin, Cork and Belfast" that the "discovery" that Kelly was once a king of Ireland was made.

Some of the Kellys believe it is a case of much Kelly, and do believe that they can be duped into paying $1 for the famous Kelly coat of arms.

The concern does not overlook the fact that every Kelly should have the famous coat of arms, and that there are only a few more left.

The letter, in part, is as follows:
Mr. Kelly, Dear Sir: We have just received from our agent in Dublin a rare old engraving of the coat of arms of the Kelly family. We are now producing these for framing and printing a pamphlet, describing it and giving the lineal descent of the first Kelly from Heremon, first king of Ireland, and through a long line of Irish monarchs. Only enough will be printed to fill advance orders. The price is only $1. Send cash with order."

MANY GROWERS ARE REPLANTING FIELDS

Farmers Putting in New Tobacco

Plants Rather Than Try to Nurse

Through Crop Hurt by

Drouth.

The Edgerton Reporter says that since the breaking of the drouth early in the week there has doubtless been a temptation to resume the planting of the tobacco fields in those places where they have been unable to get out for transplanting. It is rather late for transplanting, many growers seem to believe there is a better chance for thrifty plants freshly set than for those that have been struggling for an existence the past two or three weeks during the dry weather. There is so much of the late planted fields that was burned out and missing or stunted in growth by the long dry spell that the grower figures that it is better to take a chance on resetting the field than permit a poor stand to try and weather through. With exceptionally good conditions from this on their reasoning may not be far out of the way.
It is simply a question of what the season will bring. The middle of July though is generally considered the extreme limit for transplanting the crop, and it is taking a long chance on results.

Local rains which have fallen during the week have given temporary relief from the long drouth that has proven such a serious handicap to the tobacco crop in this state. In localities where the rain fall was sufficient some resumption of transplanting and resetting of the burned out fields has been attempted, even though half of July is passed. The early set fields in good shape and are making excellent progress since the late rains.
However, a large amount of the inland acreage in the state must be devoted to other crops rather than tobacco this season.

The Ticklemouse

--and his Sleepyland Adventures

By Roy Rutherford Bailey with Davy and Dorfy

The Shiver Cure

"It's so hot tonight," said the Ticklemouse, "I fancy it would be more fun than anything else to make some ice cream. What say, Sleepy and Twins?"

Davy and Dorfy couldn't say enough. "We might tickle Teddy Bear and let him go with us," said Willy. "Ice cream is a honey! Why wouldn't that be a jolly dish? Bears always know where to find honey," said the Mouse, watching Willy bring Teddy to life. "What say to honeycomb sundae, Teddy Bear?"

"Woot!" granted the bear, happy to be alive again. "Nothing could be better. Where shall we get the honey?"

"That's where you come in. We'll stop at my summer house for the ice cream freezer and fixings, and turn you loose in the forest. No honey, no ice cream for you. Is it a bargain?"

"It's a go!" cried Teddy, jumping through the open window. "Meet you at the old gum tree," he called back. And the shining forest swallowed him up.

The other four got to their meeting place before he did, and the ice cream was almost done when Teddy came back, his check and ear swollen big with bee stings, but with his paws and arms full of delicious wild honey.

"What a feast it was! The ice cream cooled the honey and made it almost like maple-sugar wax. The soft night breeze was cooler out there under the big trees, and the twins smiled joyously as they smacked their lips over the Ticklemouse's new and delightful dish, "honeycomb sundae."

"You must tell the soda fountain man about this combination," said Willy. "Wishingmouse, with his mouth full. "Great SCOTT! What's that?"

Something came crashing through the bushes, whimpering and whining at every jump. A tired, scared little rabbit, dripping wet and shivering in spite of the warm night, popped suddenly into the clearing and trembled more than ever at sight of the Teddy Bear.

"Why, it's our little friend, Peter Rabbit! What have you been up to now, Peter?" The Ticklemouse patted Peter's dripping back and offered him some honeycomb sundae.

"Up at old MacGregor's garden," said the guilty Peter, helping himself to the sweets. "Ate too much lettuce and radishes and got sick, and then old MacGregor chased me with a hoe."

"And then," said the Ticklemouse, soberly, for he knew the story by heart, "then you jumped into a sprinkling can to hide and found it was full of water, eh?"

Peter Rabbit stared. "Why, who told you?"

"Never you mind. You finish that sundae and run straight home to your mother. Flopsy, Mopsy and Cottontail were in bed hours ago. What you need is a big dose of camomile tea, you rascal! You'll be sick, yet."

"Ugh! That stuff! Oh, how I hate it!"

Peter was stubborn and naughty, and refused to go. The Ticklemouse whispered to Willy, who gave Peter another big dish of cream. While he was busy eating it, Willy slipped around behind the tree, lifted the freezer, and set it gently down behind Peter's wet back.

Pretty soon Peter leaned back against it, thinking it was the tree. Then he began to shiver worse than ever. He ate more and more slowly, and presently stopped altogether, looking almost frost bitten. Finally he jumped up, dropped his dish and set out post-haste for home.

"Where you going?" Teddy yelled after him, laughing so he could hardly speak.

"Home!" Peter's chattering teeth bit off the word. "Guess I'll hustle back, and ask ma for some nice hot camomile tea!"

FROGS FOR PROFIT

Marine Hospital Offers Market for Large Number of Croakers.

Fish Commissioner Meehan Enthusiastic Over Industry Gives Explicit Directions for Success in This Venture—Requires Much Care.

Lansdowne, Pa.—Frog farming has been carried on to some extent on many Pennsylvania estates in a small way for several years past. In some instances the presence of an inherited frog pond of goodly dimensions, where the croakers have herded each spring for numberless years (and increased in numbers in their congenial quarters in marshy or swampy farm ponds). It has not been difficult to establish a profitable industry by simply catching quantities of the old frogs each year and allowing the others to increase.

In other instances the industry is followed as a fashionable fad, and owners of country seats have historic ponds and streams devoted to frog raising under the care of an expert, or new ponds are provided with this object in view. The principal hotels of our large cities have for some years past demanded a sufficient quantity of frogs to provide their guests with frequent treats to the toothsome froglets and to keep up a sufficient demand to make the industry profitable.

Now there is a new incentive to frog-raising. Old Doc Bullfrog, so famous musician of our ponds, is found to be of special use for government experiments and he will now be, in greater demand than ever. The marine hospital is planning to spend considerable money this fiscal year for frogs for use in testing medicinal preparations at the hygienic laboratory of the institution.

There are many things to consider in establishing profitable frog ponds. Fish Commissioner Meehan is enthusiastic over the industry and he has given explicit directions for success in this venture. He says those who decide to undertake frog farming may make up their minds before hand that the days which will follow will not be free from care or anxiety. It will be speedily discovered that it is not sufficient to build ponds after supposed best types, stock them and then stand aside and wait for the tadpoles to change to frogs and the frogs to money or into delicious morsels of food. Enough has been learned of frog culture, however, to stimulate a country gentleman or a progressive farmer with an unutilized portion of swampy land to undertake it. Fifty dollars will build the initial ponds and inclose them with a suitable fence.

ence. There is always a strong probability that within a comparatively brief period, by the exercise of care, unceasing effort, and experiment, the work will develop into a fair market industry.

FINDS AUNT IN HUNTING ROOM

Former Columbus, O., Man Unexpectedly Reunited With Relative at Spokane, Wash.

Spokane, Wash.—W. Bennett, recently of Salt Lake, Utah, and before that a resident of Columbus, O., found his aunt, Mrs. Mary Grump, living at 225 Riverside avenue, in an unexpected way on his arrival in Spokane a few days ago.

When Bennett arrived in Spokane he left his trunk and suit case at the Union Rescue mission in charge of F. G. Desparies, who directed him to the home of Mrs. Grump for a room. He proceeded to the rooming house, where Mrs. Grump appeared at the door and, after showing the room, asked for the name of her new roomer. As he told his name the woman almost cried:

"You are not from Columbus, are you?"

Bennett replied that Columbus formerly was his home, then Mrs. Grump threw her arms about the neck of the new arrival and asked:

"Don't you know me? I am your aunt." Bennett is rooming at the home of his aunt.

SNAKE SWALLOWS TOY FROG

Child's Natural-Looking Plaything Proves Too Much for the Hungry Serpent.

Youngstown, O.—Several days ago a Park avenue child was playing with a rubber frog in Wick park. The toy disappeared mysteriously, and search as the night for the frog, the nurse was unable to find it. It was believed the frog, a bright, new and natural looking product, had been stolen.

The mysterious disappearance was explained. A blacksnake was found by a caretaker, dead in the grass in the park. Its body was unnaturally distended and he decided to investgate.

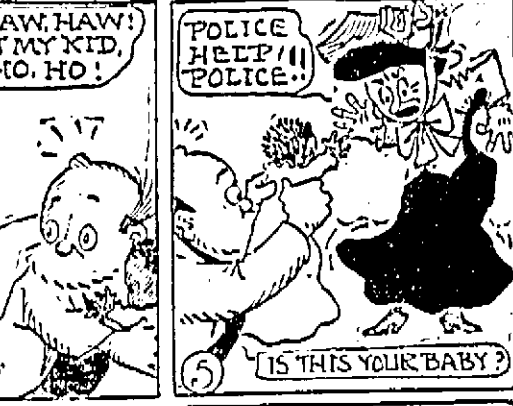

The post-mortem disclosed the snake had swallowed the rubber frog.

Following the treatment gangrene and blood poisoning developed and he suffered great agony until he layed into a state of coma prior to death.

Typewritten Signatures.

"I had a letter from a friend today," said a literary man, "giving me a warning for signing my typewritten letter to him with the typewriter, and I notified him at once that he didn't know what he was talking about. I told him I had written the letter with my own hand on the machine and it was proper to sign it in type. If I had written the letter with a pen, I told him, the signature with the pen would have been all right, and a pen was just as much an implement of writing as a typewriter was. Therefore my signature in type was quite proper, though I admitted it would not pass as a legal signature. However, I was not writing a legal document and a signature in the text of the letter was perfectly good form. That is my contention now and if anybody can prove that I am wrong I'd like to hear his argument."

Clothes Explode.

What was actually an explosion of Floyd Shannon's clothing so severely burned him that he died at Mercy hospital, says the Detroit News. Shannon was employed in the chlorate rooms of the North American Chemical company. The chemicals are extremely explosive in dust form. Shannon's clothing was impregnated with impalpable potassium chlorate powder and a spark that flew from a chisel which he was driving upon a piece of iron ignited the powder. Shannon rushed into the open air with his clothing torn to pieces and flaming. A fellow-employee ran after him, knocked him down and rolled him in the mud, extinguishing the blaze, but flesh came off with the few remnants of clothing, so badly was the man burned. Shannon was unmarried.

Would Make Their Own Iron.

A recent report issued by the department of mines, Canada, draws attention to the possibilities of establishing a local iron industry on the coast of British Columbia. At present the cost of transportation of manufactured iron from Great Britain and elsewhere is very heavy, and for some time past the question of local production has been often discussed. The report referred to states that although the quantity of ore in sight cannot be set down, good material, consisting largely of magnetites, is certainly available, while there is an abundant supply of fuel and fluxes at present in existence, and water transport is largely available. The estimated cost of producing a ton of iron is given as $16, and the approximate cost at present of Ellenton No. 1 delivered at the works, Victoria, as $21 to $28 a ton.

Advertising Talks

By GEORGE S. BANTA

Modern Methods in Advertising

The man who says he knows all about advertising isn't worth listening to. And the man who is cock sure about even one phase of it is to be looked upon with suspicion. The man with experience will tell you, "It's funny, but you never can tell what will work." However, some advance toward a scientific basis for advertising has been realized. The future's work is to minimize the lost motion which practically every advertising campaign entails. Anyone can gain publicity for his business, but the science of it comes in doing the work at the least cost.

There is no disputing the proposition that the best way yet found to advertise is to hitch your signature to the news that the American people read with so much avidity. The careful advertiser also has a mailing list with which to reach his customers. This doesn't pay, you say. How do you know? Just send a mail order house a 15-cent order and you will get their circulars and catalogues the rest of your life. If a mailing list does not pay what fools these mail order people must be.

There are other methods of advertising, but they are often best adapted to a special field or special business.

Next to knowing what to do, it is well to know where to find out what to do. The man in your town who is giving the science of publicity more attention than you are is your newspaper man. If he is anything more than a 2 by 4 solicitor to fill space he can give you some good suggestions on the best methods for you to use. Ask him about it.

NEW GAS LIGHT COMPANY OF JANESVILLE

FORTY YEARS AGO

Janesville Daily Gazette, July 15, 1870.—Jottings.—The house of Mr. Angel on bluff street, in the Third Ward, was struck by lightning during the storm last night. The chimney was considerably injured and the shingles on the roof somewhat disturbed. No one hurt.

The terrible storm which occurred last night was but a repetition of the one which had the morning previous, with the exception that not as much rain fell during the morning storm, as last night.

A large crowd was in attendance this afternoon at Van Amburgh's & Co.'s circus and menagerie and were well pleased with the exhibition and performance.

The tent is located near the depot, and is capable of accommodating all who feel disposed to attend, so that none need stay away through fear of a jam.

The members of the Janesville Shooting Club are after those persons who are killing game before the time allowed by the laws of the state. They intend to be thorough in the prosecution of this class of offenders, and request farmers to aid them in breaking up the illegal practice. By the law, a property holder is entitled to $10 for trespass and one-half of the fine assessed for the misdemeanor.

A large crowd is in town today, attending the circus.

Fewer Railroad Accidents.

The report of the Interstate commerce commission shows that during 1909 "the number of killed by railroad accidents was reduced nearly one-half and the number injured nearly by 20 per cent, and yet 2,791 were killed and 63,920 injured last year, while in 1907, 5,000 persons were killed and 70,280 were injured. Of the 125,000,000 passengers transported by the Erie railroad in five years there was not a single fatality, although its main line of one thousand miles has a large portion of its mileage in single track.

This increased safety of passengers is attributed by the Interstate commerce authorities to improvements in the road beds, double tracks and the block system.

Pleasant Manners.

Life would be more livable if more of us felt it a duty to be pleasant, however things might go.

PURE LITTLE FISHES.

Pure Little Fishes swim in the stream. Don't know nuffin' 'bout 'em. Is a sufferin' dat a-way? Gwintin' de nuffin' 'bout 'em. Gwintin' de nuffin' 'bout 'em. Gwintin' de nuffin' 'bout 'em.

Conserving the Resources.

"I have an idea," said the man who has a passion for advancing old theories, "that we would all be better for sleeping in beds with glass rollers. I think it would tend to conserve our mental and physical forces. Scientists tell us that the human body contains a certain amount of electricity, in proportion to the magnetic qualities possessed by the individual. Now, my theory is that during the process of sleep this fluid, or whatever it is, passes from the body, and consequently must be regenerated. That is why so many people wake in the morning with an aching of the limbs, and have some difficulty in pulling themselves together. Glass, as every one knows, is a nonconductor of electricity, and sleeping in a bed equipped with glass rollers might have the effect of preventing this force from leaving the body when the brain is inactive. Or, of course, it's only a theory, but it might be worth experimenting with."

Unique Locomotive.

A unique electric locomotive, that straddles a line of moving vehicles in the same way that a farmer might straddle a row of growing vegetables in crossing a field, is a commonplace sight near Bremen, Germany. The locomotive is used for hauling canal boats, and runs on a quay that has to be kept clear for the passage of drays and other vehicles. Consequently, it was built in the form of two U's, connected by a girder. One side of the locomotive runs on a track on one edge of the quay and the other runs on a track on the opposite side, while the moving vehicles have a clear passage under it.

Train Held Up by a Bear.

As a passenger train was near the big all on its approach to Tyrone, Pa., a few days ago, a large black bear, weighing at least 600 pounds, bounded upon the tracks, raised himself on its hind legs and dared the iron horse to come on.

The train was stopped and the engineer and other trainmen endeavored to chase him away, but instead of retreating he charged his enemies back into the cars and for five minutes showed signs of his wrath.

All at once he saw his way clear to escape and bounded off into the mountains.

Beginning of the Germ Theory.

Agostino Bassi, a country doctor in the north of Italy, early in the last century was the starter of the germ theory of disease. At that time a peculiar disease was killing the silkworms, bringing ruin to the whole silk industry of Italy. Bassi, by the microscope, discovered the germ which is the cause of the disease. The germ later was named Microbis Bassiana. Bassi believed and stated that human diseases were also caused by germs. Bassi's work was sneered at and scoffed by his fellow men and physicians and he failed to make a lasting impression, thereby losing great glory for Italy.

Wisconsin's Greatest Land Sale

A Wonderful Opportunity for Settlers and Investors to Secure Rich Farm Land in America's Greatest Dairy State

For

$50.00 TO $200.00 PER ACRE ON EASY TERMS

The enormous Wisconsin land holdings of the lumber interests are now on sale and investors are rushing to the hands of settlers and prospective buyers.

These rich lands, comprising over 500,000 acres, have been thrown on the market by the American Immigration Company of Chippewa Falls, Wis., at such low prices and on such easy terms that the whole country is aroused. The center of activity is in the famous Round Lake Country, in Sawyer County, where (Round Lake) the very crown of ROUND LAKE WISCONSIN FARM LANDS, is being cut up into farms.

The American Immigration Company owns the fee to all the lands they offer to sell.

The prices run from $50.00 to $200.00 per acre, depending on the value of the standing timber, location, etc.

The land is sold on ten year's time. The soil is rich and yields abundant crops. On much of this land there is enough hardwood timber to pay for the farm. It is a country of abundant rainfall and the pivot of water.

This is unquestionably the greatest cheap land opportunity of the century. Wisconsin land values are advancing by leaps and bounds.

The ROUND LAKE WISCONSIN FARM LANDS are going fast and the best bargains in at the ground floor prices can be made only independent in five years. The time to act is NOW.

Free book, Map and full information may be secured by addressing the local representative of the American Immigration Company.

Wiley—Oh, you're all wrong about her. It takes a woman to size up another woman.

Hubby—Yes, or to run her down.

Not Meant That Way.

"Some folks want funny inscriptions engraved on their silver," said the jeweler. "Take wedding knives. Many wedding cakes are such mountainous affairs that a special knife is required to cut them. One of last month's brides cut her cake with a knife that was a present from her aunt. I guess not many of the guests got to read the inscription; if they had they would be talking about it yet. Those knives are supposed to be used for cutting the bride's cake and then laid on the shelf for the rest of time, but the aunt couldn't distinguish apparently between wedding and birthday cakes, for she made us engrave on the knife: 'May I serve thee well and often.'"

The great volume of advertising carried in these columns is due to the great circulation of The Gazette. 5300 homes receive The Gazette daily and from this large number of homes many people are looking for just the things advertised each day.
